

Creating a Positive Workplace Culture

Below are several tips to consider as you actively create a positive workplace culture.

As an employee, your attitudes, beliefs and behaviors go a long way toward setting the tone in your work environment. For coworkers to feel energized and motivated to do their best, they look to you to set expectations as well as examples for their own way of contributing to a positive workplace culture.

How you communicate and manage your personal interactions directly impacts morale, performance and the successful resolution of conflict.

For additional guidance on how you can positively impact workplace culture, reach out to the EAP. Coaching services are available to all USPS employees.

GREAT EMPLOYEES:

- Model patience
- Arrive on time
- Are open to questions & feedback
- Acknowledge others for good work
- Use “please” & “thank you” often
- Admit when they don’t know something
- Follow up if they don’t know something
- Seek to find something likable in others
- Are committed to what they do
- Are excited about what they do
- Take accountability
- Hold others accountable
- Make good decisions
- Are good communicators